

The illustration shows the specially designed leather case which can be supplied with the Model 40 Avometer Mk. II if desired.

An instrument can be used whilst still retained in this ever-ready type carrying case.

Should it ever be your misfortune to have to return the instrument to the Company for repair, pack it carefully and enclose a note informing our engineers of the faults you have found.

Due to high operational standards maintained throughout our works, and the close limits within which we work, breakdowns are comparatively rare. The majority of failures can be traced to damage in transit, or careless handling for which the Company cannot be held responsible except in those cases where the buyer is advised of our liability.
